

WALTER MATTHAU
GLENDA JACKSON
IN A FILM BY RONALD NEAME

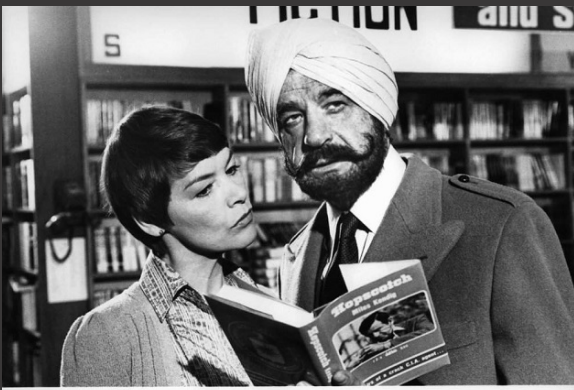

HOPSCOTCH

HO-1-1. WALTER MATTHAU stars as Miles Kendig, a top CIA agent whose threat to write a book exposing illicit Agency chicanery makes him a hopscotching target of every intelligence agency from Washington to Vladivostok in "HOPSCOTCH," big-budget adventure-comedy. Also starring Glenda Jackson, Sam Waterston, Herbert Lom and Ned Beatty, the film was directed by Ronald Neame for producers Edie and Ely Landau from a screenplay by Brian Garfield and Bryan Forbes for Avco Embassy Pictures release.

HO-1-2. HERBERT LOM and WALTER MATTHAU, in the respective roles of a Russian KGB Chief Operative and an elite American CIA Agent writing a book, enjoy a shot of Russian vodka between scenes during the filming of the big-budget comedy-adventure, "HOPSCOTCH." The picture also stars Glenda Jackson, Ned Beatty and Sam Waterston and is directed by Ronald Neame for producers Edie and Ely Landau for release in the fall of 1980 by Avco Embassy Pictures.

HO-5. WALTER MATTHAU is disguised in this scene to conceal the fact that he is actually the author of the book he is holding -- an expose of international espionage secrets -- in the high-budget comedy-adventure, "HOPSCOTCH." GLENDA JACKSON, looking on, co-stars as a former CIA agent. Also starring SAM WATERSTON, NED BEATTY, and HERBERT LOM, the picture was directed by Ronald Neame for producers Edie and Ely Landau from a screenplay by Brian Garfield and Bryan Forbes for Avco Embassy Pictures release.

HO-22. WALTER MATTHAU (left) starring as Miles Kendig, a disgruntled CIA agent who is writing an expose of agency chicanery, looks over plans for a complicated electronic gadget with a technician (MIKE OVITZ) in this scene from the high-budget comedy-adventure, "HOPSCOTCH." Also starring GLENDA JACKSON, HERBERT LOM, SAM WATERSTON and NED BEATTY, the film was produced by Edie and Ely Landau and directed by Ronald Neame from a screenplay by Brian Garfield and Bryan Forbes.
